OPINION AND COMMENT

For the second time during this fateful year the University has experienced the loss of its official head—this time in the death of MARVIN HENDRIX STACY Hendrix Stacy, Dean of the College of Liberal Arts for the past five years and Chairman of the Faculty since President Graham's death in October.

We cannot measure the loss we feel in the going of Dean Stacy. For eighteen years, as instructor, as associate professor and professor, as dean and chairman of the faculty, he has been so intimately connected with the life of the University that his death takes out of it collectively and individually something which we had imperceptibly come to regard as a part—and the better part, too—of ourselves.

Dean Stacy's career here has already become one of the fine traditions of the campus. As an undergraduate he stood out pre-eminently as a man of ability and power, this being evidenced by the honors he won and positions he held in student life. In the class room, he was early recognized as one of the real teachers of the University. His sympathy with the students taught and his clarity of presentation set him apart in the minds of the student body as a great teacher. In the role of dean, he became the loved adviser of the men upon the campus in all that pertained to their conduct as a body of self-governing students, and in the faculty his counsel and leadership were of the sort that won from his colleagues the highest admiration and respect.

And similarly in the University community and the State at large. One frequently remarks the closeness of the ties which bind members of the University community together. Few men have ever been connected with the University who have been more generally esteemed as a neighbor and citizen than he, and the correctness of his judgments and his fairness in all matters of private or public concern were universally conceded. By virtue of these qualities, coupled with a rare eloquence and breadth of vision, he was also constantly sought throughout the State as a speaker and leader in all that related to the finer life of the people.

Strong in the affection of the campus and State, his coming to the headship of the University in its hour of loss brought stability and assurance for the future, and under his leadership the University was quickly readjusting itself to the tasks which lay ahead. Without thought of self, he devoted himself unreservedly to the duties of his office, and fell at his post in service to the State and Nation.

Again, we repeat, that in the going of this fine, sympathetic, Christian gentleman, this neighborly, approachable, human comrade, who walked with us in the path of service, we miss an indefinable, better part of ourselves.

At the meeting of the Board of Trustees in Raleigh on January 28th, Dr. H. W. Chase, Professor of the Philosophy of Education from 1910 to 1914, and of Psychology from 1914 to date, was appointed chairman of the faculty to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Chairman of the Faculty Stacy.

Dr. Chase is a native of Massachusetts, an A. B. graduate of Dartmouth College (1904), and received the degree of doctor of philosophy from Clark University in 1910. During his nine years of service at the University, Dr. Chase has been closely connected with the student body, has contributed frequently to University and other scholarly publications, and has been recognized as a teacher of unusual scholarship and ability. He has been especially valuable to the University as a member of the faculties of the School of Education and the Summer School and as an acceptable speaker on educational and social subjects throughout the State.

Upon the death of President Graham he was appointed acting dean. He becomes the official head of the University with the full confidence of his colleagues.

THE REVIEW reproduces in the following paragraphs a letter by R. D. W. Connor, President of the General Alumni Association, which has recently been sent to all alumni urging their support of the campaign which began on February 10th in the inrest of the Students' Activities Building as a memorial to the late President Graham. If for any reason the letter failed to reach you, take this opportunity to read it and act on the suggestions contained in it.

You, with the rest of us, have felt since leaving the University a loyalty and devotion for your Alma Mater that wanted to express itself in terms of appreciation for her service. You have felt with the rest of us in recent days the pride of connection with and partnership in an institution that has served the entire State of North Carolina in a way that has called forth the approval and applause of all. And now that the death of President Graham has lost to us the matchless leadership which was serving the State through the State's University, our Alma Mater, all the sons of Carolina are drawn together as men who have experienced a common loss; and we feel a renewed impulse to express our loyalty and love in terms of practical service.

The enclosed booklet opens to us the opportunity to say what we think of the service President Graham rendered to our entire State through our Alma Mater; to write ourselves into a memorial which, like the man, will continue to serve every county and every community in North Carolina as it sends its sons to the University. The Student Activities Building is endorsed by the Faculty and Trustees of the University, and by a committee at large from the State. No more fitting memorial can be erected to the man and no greater constructive service can be rendered to our Alma Mater.

May I not, therefore, urge you (1) to give this matter the thoughtful consideration it merits and the most generous response you feel able to make; (2) to seek out the director of the campaign in your community, offer him your co-operation, and throw behind the campaign the weight of your influence and support; (3) to make it a point to interest others in this cause which is big enough to appeal to all.

The response of the student body to the Graham Memorial (we stop the press to insert a note about the local campaign) has been splendid—the sort that challenges the attention and the generous giving of all alumni. Four hundred and fifteen men seen on the first night of the campaign subscribed $14,500 and the goal aimed at is $25,000. One student handed Secretary Coates a check for $500 and fifteen seniors in one group pledged themselves for $1,500. Several students subscribed $200 each. Many men working their way through college contributed in large amounts, thereby making real sacrifices.

THE CAMPUS RESPONDS SPLENDIDLY

In the President's Report for 1917 the late President Graham spoke as follows: "In April, 1917, came America's entry in the great world war: a fact of supreme significance to the University, as to every vital institution in the Nation. Obviously it means great sacrifices; but it means also rich compensations and great new responsibilities. These will be, if adequately met, of such importance as to make this report in the eyes of the future historian of the University mark the beginning of a new era in its development as clearly separated from the fifty years that followed the Civil War as that period is from the fifty years that preceded."

ANNUAL REPORT

The accuracy of this statement is abundantly borne out by the reports for 1918 of the various officers of the University recently appearing under the title "The Report of the Chairman of the Faculty." For, while the reports are similar in many respects to those of preceding years, every one views the work of the University from a new angle, and a new attitude towards the future is presented on every page. The University of 1918 was greatly different from that of former years, and the new spirit which entered with the coming of the war has in many important respects come to stay.

A careful reading of the reports inevitably leads to the discovery of several important recurring themes.

RECURRING THEMES

First of all there is the admission that the imposition of a military regime upon the academic made stock-taking a necessity. Every department and every instructor had to meet a new situation created by the war, and in doing this made a new appraisal of the value of courses and methods of the past. In the second place there is the expression of belief that much is to be gained by the intensification of courses and improvement of instruction. Wherever a higher grade of instruction can be secured, it is recognized that it is incumbent upon the University to secure it. The value of physical well-being is especially emphasized, and the inclusion in the curriculum of additional courses in the social sciences and in business and commerce is repeatedly urged.

Definite growth of the University in a number of important particulars is also evidenced. The physical plant is now valued at $1,200,000, with the new engineering building which is to cost $115,000 to be added during the present year. The University Library contained 83,151 volumes on August 15th, which, together with the 10,000 titles acquired in the purchase of the Weeks Collection and the regular additions to date, brings the collection near the goal of 100,000 volumes. In scholarly and popular publications high records were established during the year. Studies in Philology and The Journal of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society were especially distinctive, and the High School Journal and the Extension Leaflets—both new publications—won high recognition throughout the entire country. Reference to the list of publications and addresses of members of the faculty evidences participation by the University in the affairs of the learned societies of the country and an especially vital interest in the public welfare of North Carolina. Throughout its entirety, the complete report shows that the University is alert, adaptable, and that it is functioning in a large, beneficial way in the life of the State and Nation.

Last year THE REVIEW took special occasion to present the important recommendations appearing in the individual reports in order that the alumni might know what plans the University is maturing for the future. Specific recommendations presented to the Trustees in the report by Chairman of the Faculty Stacy included the following: Provision for the establishment of a School of Commerce and Business through which the young men and women of North Carolina and the South would have an opportunity to equip themselves for efficient participation in the development of the country's industries; the appointment of a Director of Music to have charge of the various musical organizations now on the campus and to offer courses of a cultural value in the history and appreciation of music; the appointment of a Health Officer to have charge of the University Infirmary, to supervise all matters pertaining to the health and housing of the student body, and to assist the University in its work in the interest of public health throughout the State; the appointment of a Publications Editor to systematize the business management of the various publications issued by the University and to have oversight of the news service of the University; and better provision for the comfort and welfare of women students and the erection of a woman's building in the near future.

Recommendations appearing in the reports of the other officers included: the addition of instructors in the School of Law and the provision of a three-year law course; the addition of instructors and equipment in the School of Medicine; the provision of a recitation building, a building for the Department of Geology, and the enlargement of the Chemical Laboratory; the utilization of the entire first floor of the Alumni Building for administrative office purposes; the development of the work of the Bureau of Extension; the installation of additional stack in the Library; the addition of instructors in the School of Education and the further development of the Summer School; and the grading and improvement of the grounds east of Caldwell Hall.

As indicated in the legislative information appearing in the State press, the University has presented the General Assembly with a program of activities contemplated for 1919-21 calling for an annual maintenance fund of $215,000. As already stated, a large part of this increased income is intended to cover the cost of the proposed School of Commerce, the enlargement of the Law School, the appointment of Directors of Health and Music, the development of the Bureau of Extension, and other objects emphasized in the recommendations of the Chairman of the Faculty and other officers. The program has been well thought out, the request is moderate, and if the increased maintenance is granted there is every assurance that it will yield definite returns to the State of North Carolina.

After two years of cessation in major athletics, the question of college athletic activities has again been brought to the front. As a result of military training, the idea of keeping students in fine physical condition has been greatly emphasized, and the value of their participation in some sort of setting-up exercises or outdoor athletics has been distinctly apparent. With the passing of military training and the return to normal conditions, there is great danger that the American colleges will lose sight of this value and will permit the return to the old order in which a few men starred on the varsity organizations, while the greater part of the student body stood on the side lines at a distance and watched.

While it is to be hoped that intercollegiate athletic relations on the part of Carolina will continue to be of very great interest, it is at the same time to be hoped that the athletic management will make provision for the participation of every student in some phase of athletic endeavor. The student body of Carolina needs all that can be given it in the way of physical development, and complete apparatus and athletic grounds should be provided to this end. Unquestionably it is desirable to carry out a fine intercollegiate athletic program under the leadership of fine directors, such as Mr. Campbell proved to be, but it is none the less desirable that provision be made for every student on the campus to participate in all such athletic activities as will insure him recreation from his daily routine and the building of a well-developed, efficient body. The war has given us the opportunity to see the athletic activities of the past in perspective, and we should be able to act wisely in accord with the experience gained in this way.

Kemp Plummer Battle, former president of the University and professor emeritus of history since 1907, died at his home in Chapel Hill on Tuesday afternoon, February 4th, at five o'clock. Funeral services were held in Chapel Hill in Gerrard Hall and in Christ Church at Raleigh, interment being made in Raleigh. Death came peacefully after an illness of about one month with heart trouble. In his death the University loses one of its most illustrious sons and officials, and the State a citizen whose service has been of inestimable value. Copy for this issue of THE REVIEW was already in the hands of the printer at the time of Dr. Battle's death. An extended appreciation and sketch of his life will appear in the March issue.

It is not for the mere sake of form that THE REVIEW urges the immediate planning for record reunions at the approaching Commencement, June 14-18. Every alumnus realizes that with the death of President Graham and Dean Stacy the University has suffered an inconceivably great loss. He also realizes that the military regime and the demands of the present hour have left their profound impress upon the campus. He cannot escape the conviction that Alma Mater needs every bit of the support and comfort that comes from the counsel and presence of her sons here upon the campus.

It is for this larger purpose, this purpose of charting the course for the future and of bringing strength to the institution in its hour of supreme trial, that we issue the call to one and all to come back home for a day or two at least, and let's take counsel for the days ahead. Mark your calendar now!

CAROLINA PLAYMAKERS ORGANIZED

"The Carolina Playmakers" is the name of a new organization at the University which promises to take on State-wide significance and influence. The organization, according to proposed plans, will be the center of a movement in a new field for North Carolinians—the field of community drama. Professor Frederick H. Koch, of the department of Dramatic Literature, explained the purpose of the new organization at a lecture to the faculty, students and townspeople on January 24, the lecture being illustrated with lantern slides of original plays staged in the northwest. Professor Koch has been doing experimental work in folk drama in the University of North Dakota for the past thirteen years. His work in that section of the country has received national recognition by leading dramatic and literary critics. He is a new-comer at the University, having joined the faculty last fall. His work in the field of community drama at the North Dakota University not only met with unprecedented success, but became the nucleus of a great movement that has spread and taken root throughout a great section of the northwest and beyond.

The prime purpose of the organization will be the production of original plays dealing with North Carolina life and people, and the promotion of such play-making in North Carolina. This work will be carried on in connection with the department of Community Drama and the University Extension Bureau and the Carolina Playmakers will present programs of original representative plays throughout the State.

North Carolina, Professor Koch thinks, is richly endowed both with varied and interesting human types; it is as yet a pioneer State whose greatest development is to come—a State that offers an unrivalled opportunity for the production of a big new play—a drama of the people. With the University as a center it is thought that this new movement will spread throughout the State and attain a national significance.

LAW BANQUET

Chief Justice Walter Clark, of the North Carolina Supreme Court, was the principal speaker and honor guest at the annual banquet of the law class held January 31. Professors L. P. McGehee, A. C. McIntosh, and P. H. Winston, of the law faculty, were on the speech-making program proper, while Mrs. I. O. T. Emory, Silas Lucas, Norman Boren, and Albert Oettinger were student representatives to respond with pithy talks.

MARVIN HENDRIX STACY

Marvin Hendrix Stacy, instructor, professor, dean of the College of Liberal Arts for the past five years and chairman of the University faculty since the passing of the late President Graham last October, died at his home here on Tuesday, January 21, from influenza and complications, following an illness of eight days. Thus the second official head of the University has been claimed by the prevailing epidemic, and the University and State again mourn the loss of a leader whose place is not easily filled.

Marvin Hendrix Stacy, the son of a Methodist minister, the Rev. L. E. Stacy, of Shelby, who survives, was born 41 years ago in Burke county. After preparatory training he entered the University and received his Ph. B. degree in 1902.

A Leader in Undergraduate Days

In his undergraduate days Professor Stacy was a leading influential character in the life of the campus, being readily recognized as a moulder of student thought and sentiment. He found his chief interest in extra-curriculum activities in debating and public speaking, but was a scholar above all, as his election to membership in the Phi Beta Kappa national honorary scholarship society clearly demonstrated. He was president of his graduating class and a winner of the much coveted Willie P. Maugum Medal.

Pre-eminently a Teacher

Professor Stacy was pre-eminently a teacher. Following graduation he was appointed instructor in Mathematics, remaining continuously in the service of the University with the exception of two years spent at Cornell.

From the outset, his career as a teacher was marked by steady progress. He was instructor in mathematics from 1902-06, receiving the M. A. degree in 1904; was a student at Cornell University in 1905, 1906, 1911; was associate professor of engineering from 1906 to 1910, when he was made professor of civil engineering. His ability and sound judgment were signally recognized by the late President Graham who appointed him acting dean of the College of Liberal Arts when the former became acting president in 1913. His elevation to the position of dean came the following year. At President Graham's death Dean Stacy became chairman of the faculty and hence acting president. Every member of the faculty placed the highest sort of estimate upon his judgment, which was always accepted as fair and sound. He enjoyed the full respect and esteem of this body of his colleagues.

Administers Student Discipline

While dean he administered student discipline in a way that won for him the love and admiration of the entire student body. "He took the common-sense view that there was only one rule to be enforced—the rule of good citizenship. The same laws obtained on the campus as elsewhere in North Carolina. He required that the students show the same sort of interest in their work that the faculty showed in theirs. The faculty member, he held, and said, was merely an older student, and both teacher and pupil sought a common object in truth."

Popular as Speaker

Dean Stacy was perhaps the best known member of the faculty in the community and in Orange county. He was intensely and whole-heartedly interested in all matters relating to civic pride and community welfare. While it was chiefly through his college work that Professor Stacy was best known to the people of the State, he has ever been in great demand as a public speaker and has gone into every section of the State in the interest of popular education, speaking for the most part on subjects pertaining to better schools, roads, churches, and like matters relating to community development. For sometime Dean Stacy addressed the Bible class of the local Methodist Sunday School every Sunday morning, and the large regular attendance at each meeting gave concrete evidence of his hold on the student body and community.

Married Miss Inez Koonce

Professor Stacy was married to Miss Inez Koonce, of Trenton, on November 12, 1912, who survives. Their home life was ideal. Both Professor and Mrs. Stacy were vitally interested in all matters pertaining to the community, the latter being president of the Chapel Hill Community Club at one time. The other immediate relatives surviving are his father, Rev. L. E. Stacy, of Shelby, and the following brothers and sisters; Judge W. P. Stacy, of Wilmington; H. E. Stacy, of Lumberton; L. E. Stacy, Jr., of Wilkesboro; Mrs. J. J. Harding, of Charlotte; Mrs. C. C. Weaver, of Emory, Va.; Mrs. H. F. Kinsman, of Hamlet; Miss Rosa Stacy, of Emory, Va.; Miss Nancy Stacy, of Burlington.

Interment at Chapel Hill

The funeral of Dean Stacy was held at 2 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 22, interment being made in the local cemetery. A service was conducted for the family at the residence, followed by a short service at the grave, Rev. Euclid McWhorter officiating. Simplicity and beauty, which breathed throughout the life of Dean Stacy, marked the burial rites.

The following were the active and honorary pallbearers: Honorary—Governor Thomas W. Bickett, Lieut. Gov. O. Max Gardner, Prof. Eugene C. Brooks, D. G. Brummitt, Victor S. Bryant, W. N. Everett, R. D. W. Connor, Judge W. A. Hoke, Prof. H. H. Williams, Prof. F. P. Venable, George Pickard, Mayor W. S. Roberson, Major William Cain, Prof. H. M. Wagstaff, Prof. A. C. McIntosh, Prof. T. J. Wilson; Active—Prof. George Howe, Prof. A. H. Patterson, Prof. I. H. Manning, Prof. W. DeB. MacNider, Prof. C. S. Mangum, Charles T. Woolen, Prof. H. W. Chase, Prof. Kent J. Brown, Prof. L. R. Wilson, and Prof. T. F. Hickerson. A committee from the State Senate composed of Lieutenant-Governor Gardner, Dorman Thompson, G. V. Cowper, and J. A. Brown, assisted in the burial ceremony.

The presence of hundreds of students, friends and alumni and the profusion of wreaths and beautiful floral offerings at the grave plainly bespoke the high esteem and affection in which Dean Stacy was held.

IMPORTANT TRUSTEE MEETING

The Board of Trustees of the University had its regular meeting in Raleigh on January 28th, 1919. The meeting was largely attended, the Governor presiding.

The matter exciting most general interest, of course, was the question of the Presidency of the University. The Board, after carefully considering the situation, determined not to go into an election at that time, but to appoint a committee to investigate the qualifications of those whose names have been suggested and any others whom the committee might consider favorably, and to report their findings to the Board as early as possible. The Governor appointed as members of this committee Messrs. Richard H. Lewis, of Raleigh, Chairman; Victor S. Bryant, of Durham; W. N. Everett, of Rockingham; George Stephens, of Charlotte; and Charles Whedbee, of Hertford. This committee is instructed to make its report to the Governor as early as possible and the Governor, upon receiving it, will call a special meeting of the Board of Trustees to act upon it. In the meantime, as a temporary arrangement for administering the affairs of the University, the Board elected Dr. H. W. Chase, Professor of Psychology, Chairman of the Faculty.

The report of the late Dean Stacy, Chairman of the Faculty, together with his budget for the next two years, was laid before the Board and thoroughly discussed. All of his recommendations, embracing a school of commerce, a directorship of music, the expansion of the Law Department, provision for the better care of women students, the appointment of a health officer, and the appointment of a publication editor, were adopted. The budget was also approved, and the Legislative Committee of the Board was instructed to present it to the General Assembly.

Other matters of interest which came before the Board were the naming of the new Applied Science Building the Phillips Building, in honor of Professor James Phillips, Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy, 1826-1867; Professor Charles Phillips, Professor of Engineering and Mathematics, 1854-1868 and 1875-79, and Professor William Battle Phillips, Professor of Agricultural Chemistry and Mining, 1885-1888; the adoption of resolutions in memory of the late President Graham; and the appointment of a committee to prepare resolutions in memory of the late Dean Stacy.

The following, whose terms as members of the Executive Committee had expired, were re-elected to succeed themselves: Messrs. R. H. Lewis, Charles Lee Smith, Charles Whedbee, James S. Manning, and Francis D. Winston. Dr. E. C. Brooks, who as Superintendent of Public Instruction succeeds Dr.

J. Y. Joyner as a trustee, was elected to succeed Dr. Joyner on the Executive Committee. This concluded the business of the meeting.

The following members of the Board of Trustees were present: Governor T. W. Bickett, Chairman; R. D. W. Connor, Secretary; B. L. Banks, Jr.; Thos. H. Battle; Jno. G. Blount; Jno. Gray Blount; E. C. Brooks; Victor S. Bryant; Perrin Busbee; Bennehan Cameron; Julian S. Carr; John S. Cunningham; R. A. Doughton; W. N. Everett; E. L. Gaither; Thomas J. Gold; John W. Graham; James A. Gray; J. GRAHAM MEMORIAL LAUNCHED ON CAMPUS

Just as THE REVIEW goes to press Secretary Coates announces that $20,000 have been subscribed by Carolina students to the Graham Memorial fund as the result of a well attended mass meeting of the student body held on the 13th and a campus canvass which followed immediately afterwards. At this time many canvassers have not turned in their reports and consequently the total student subscription is expected to reach $25,000. The results of the campaign thus launched on the campus are heralded as a strong challenge to the people of the State to push toward the set goal of $150,000. The contributions made by the students range from $25 to $500 and include practically every man in the University. To Charles E. Kistler, a student from Morganton, goes the honor of subscribing the largest sum, his contribution amounting to $500. Many students who are working their way through college made large contributions. Several students subscribed $200 each. The first night's canvass resulted in a total subscription of $14,500 from only 415 men seen out of the student body of over 800, an average of $35 each.

Albert M. Coates, Executive Secretary to the fund, presided over the mass meeting which preceded the canvass. He happily introduced representative students who responded with short and snappy talks regarding the purpose of the campaign.

"The trustees of the University, the faculty, the alumni, and the rest, in the effort to devise a memorial which would express at the same time the love we had for President Graham and our interest in the University in a practical way, decided that it should be a building which would gather into it all the fine, free spirit of this campus through the men who make it what it is and the organizations and activities which they have built up; a building which would be a recognition and an approval of the student initiative and self-reliance and power which President Graham did so much to encourage and promote; a Student Activities Building to be known as the Graham Memorial." Mr. Coates declared in his introductory address.

In commenting on the results of the student campaign and its significance to the people of the State, Secretary Coates speaks in part thus:

"The response of the student body indicates the big terms in which even the students think of this movement. It is a stirring statement of their appreciation of President Graham. It reveals in a vital way the distinct need on the campus for this sort of memorial building. The deep interest in the welfare of the University which it represents will always be a memorial in itself to the efforts of President Graham to draw not only the student, but all men, into a partnership in building up an institution which would grip the imagination of men and challenge the support of North Carolina.

"It is a challenge to the interest and the loyalty of the alumni. It is a challenge to all public spirited men who are interested in the work and in the development of their State University. It is an appeal to every community that is represented in the University student body."

The campaign was launched over the State generally on February 10th, although the exact date for starting the movement in the various communities is being determined by the local directors. Local directors are being appointed in every community in the State and the work of organization is continuing at a rapid rate. Reports being received are exceedingly encouraging and indicate that the campaign will be vigorously and speedily pushed to success.

THE UNIVERSITY IN LETTERS

BY WAY OF TRIBUTE

The following resolutions and extracts from editorials taken from an innumerable list of such messages called forth by the death of Dean Stacy indicate the appreciation and high esteem in which the University's late official head was held.

Resolutions of the Faculty

The faculty deeply feels the loss of its colleague and official head, Marvin Hendrix Stacy. As instructor, professor, dean, and chairman of the faculty, he was recognized as a man of great ability, both as a teacher and executive. His influence upon the University in its upbuilding and guidance has been most helpful and he will be greatly missed in its councils and in all matters that concern its welfare.

Quiet in manner, utterly unselfish, he was strong and wise in action. He had the love and respect of the students and the admiration and affection of his colleagues. Clear, convincing and eloquent as a speaker, he was a power for good in the University and the State, doing in this way a large and important work in bringing the University and its work to the attention of the people whom it serves.

Loyal, true, eminently just, sympathetic and considerate of others, he was in the highest sense a Christian gentleman. We mourn his death and extend our heartfelt sympathy to his family.—Louis R. Wilson, F. P. Venable, H. M. Wagstaff, M. C. S. Noble, T. J. Wilson, Jr., Committee.

Resolutions of the Student Body

Whereas, An all-wise God has seen fit to take from our midst our beloved friend and teacher, Marvin Hendrix Stacy, and

Whereas, Feeling that to the whole student body he has ever been a kind friend and wise counsellor, and

Whereas, To all of us singly and together, he has been a generous spirit, easy of access, sympathetic in understanding, whole hearted in devotion to us, and

Whereas, He has sacrificed his all to serve his and our dear Alma Mater, toiling tirelessly and unselfishly to serve her in these recent days.

Be it therefore resolved, That the above convey our heartfelt sympathy to his family and serve as a sincere expression of the sentiment of the whole student body of the University.—L. H. Hodges, Senior Class; E. E. White, Junior Class; Earl Reaves, Sophomore Class; Sanford Brown, Freshman Class; Mrs. Irene Graves, Law School; Donald Cobb, Medical School; J. S. White, Pharmacy School; J. S. Terry, Graduate School.

Resolutions of the General Assembly

The North Carolina State Senate paid tribute to the late Prof. Marvin H. Stacy, adjourning out of respect to his memory and adopting the following resolutions:

"The General Assembly of North Carolina, having heard with profound regret of the death of Professor Marvin Hendrix Stacy, Professor of Civil Engineering and Chairman of the Faculty of the University of North Carolina, who died at his home in Chapel Hill on Tuesday, Jan. 21, 1919, is desirous of expressing its sense of the loss which the University and State have thereby sustained.

"A graduate of the University and for sixteen years a member of its faculty, Professor Stacy had risen from the position of instructor in mathematics to that of professor of civil engineering and dean of the College of Liberal Arts, and had fulfilled the several trusts which had been committed to him with such efficiency and fidelity to duty as to win the complete confidence of students, faculty and trustees. Upon the death of the late President Edward Kidder Graham, he was at once placed in charge of the administration of the affairs of the University as chairman of the faculty, which position at the time of his death he was filling with great ability and promise. Therefore, be it

"Resolved, by the Senate, the House of Representatives concurring, That in the death of Professor Stacy the University and the State have lost a public servant whose career marked him as a teacher endowed with high powers of inspiration, as a counsellor of sound judgment, and as a man of high and lofty ideals of service and broad, liberal sympathies.

"Resolved, further, That these resolutions be spread upon the journals of the Senate and the House of Representatives as a testimonial of the high esteem in which the people of North Carolina held Professor Stacy as a man, and their confidence in him as an educational leader.

"Resolved, third, That the Secretary of State have a copy of these resolutions transmitted to the family of the deceased."

Resolutions of Sympathy

"Whereas, The members of the Senate have heard with sincerest sorrow of the death of Prof. M. H. Stacy, chairman of the faculty of the University of North Carolina, and brother of our colleague and friend, Senator H. E. Stacy, Senator from the twelfth district, Now, therefore,

"Be it Resolved, That individually and as a body we extend to Senator Stacy and the other members of his family our sincerest sympathy in their bereavement.

"That when the Senate adjourns today, it do adjourn in honor of the memory of Professor M. H. Stacy."

Tributes from Individuals and the Press

Upon the death of Dr. Graham the trustees of the University had little hesitation in placing Professor Stacy in charge of the administration of the affairs of the University while there was being given to the matter of selecting a permanent president the care that the importance of the task made necessary. There were those who felt that the final action of the trustees would be to make him president of the institution and had he lived and this action had resulted it is certain that he would have filled the place with high credit.

No member of the faculty was more loved by the student body. He enjoyed their confidence to the fullest extent. They trusted him implicitly. His dealings with the students as dean placed a severe test on his popularity, but resulted in increasing rather than diminishing it.

He was the ideal teacher and it was his remarkable usefulness in this relationship to the student that might have led to a question as to whether he might not have lessened his possibilities of service by accepting administrative and executive duties.

The death of this modest, high-minded, tireless worker for the upbuilding of the young manhood and the young womanhood of the State is indeed a great loss.—News and Observer.

I was greatly distressed to hear of the death of Prof. M. H. Stacy, Acting President of the University of North Carolina," said Secretary Daniels. "I had known him for many years and had a high regard for him and an appreciation of his wisdom and ability. I know of the admiration and esteem which the late President Graham had for him, and the esteem in which the student body held him through his many years of connection with the University.—Josephus Daniels.

He was one of the finest interpreters of the college to the student, and he had a rare gift in giving the collegians a State rather than a parochial contact. He never forgot, nor allowed them to forget, that they were citizens of North Carolina above being citizens of the college community, and they were ready for college autonomy because they were trained for the large citizenship. Mr. Stacy was not unlike Dr. Graham in the genius, the sanity and the high aim that presided over his thought and empowered him to accept the routine of professional life as strength to do an ever increasing number of things instinctively, for education was to him making instinct to do the work of intelligence. And as Dr. Graham, so was he ever standing with wings outspread ready to catch the wind of inspiration when it came.—Oscar Coffin in Raleigh Times.

Again have the educational forces of the State of North Carolina and the University particularly suffered a tremendous loss in the death of Marvin Hendrix Stacy, Acting President of the University since the death of Edward K. Graham. Both fell victims of the influenza epidemic. Dean Stacy was a powerful force for right and justice, his dealings have always been fair and liberal and he rightly deserved the affection of the student body and the honor of the State. Stacy was a brilliant, practical man, whose realm lay in the mathematical and engineering field, rather than the literary, and for that reason was less known than his co-worker Graham, but in many respects his equal. As dean of the faculty under President Graham, it was Stacy who helped, in the administration of his duties, to make the administration of University affairs in recent years such a truly great success. Those students who have come into contact with Mr. Stacy, as pupils in mathematics under his teaching, will never forget the admirable traits and that honesty of purpose which characterized his whole being.

Time was too short for him as acting president of the University to have really come into his full power of leadership, but had he been spared to guide the destinies of the University longer, he would have ranked in many respects the equal of Graham. Stacy had a broad, common sense vision, that was serving and would have served the University admirably in the present crisis. Son of a Methodist preacher, and a member of a family that has reflected unusual ability in places of public trust, courageous and fearless, a devout Christian, Dean Stacy has left his imprint firmly upon the State.—Greensboro Daily News.

In the death of Marvin Hendrix Stacy the University has suffered one of its great losses. I was his teacher in his student days. I appreciated his high manly qualities, admired his strong character, and in the later days of friendship grew to love him. Mentally he was highly endowed. He grasped a subject readily, thought deeply, made his decision after careful weighing, and then was firm as a rock though just and sympathetically considerate to those who differed with him. It is not strange that such a man was a force for all that is best in the life of the University from his college days through the years of his apprenticeship to those of mature accomplishment and gathering honors. He was one of the best teachers in the faculty, sparing himself in no detail of pains and time and repetition, getting the best work out of his students. And they appreciated the labor spent upon them, the unruffled patience, the even-handed justice and the insight into their difficulties.

He was admirable as an administrator, clear, convincing and eloquent as a speaker, a man of few words, but they were well weighed, to the point and not to be misunderstood. Quiet, simple, unaffected, a thoroughbred gentleman in the highest sense. I never found in him the trait of self-seeking, rather I had to argue him out of a sort of self-depreciation.

He sought no new honors nor advancement, telling me once that the thought of present duty was enough for him and I realized that duty had for him the one clear call unmarred by thought of self, unstained by pride of achievement. Such sweet, gentle, true natures are rare. They constitute the finest, the highest among men though not always so applauded. Such are the salt of the world. Francis P. Venable in University News Letter.

For five years Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, it was his difficult task to administer discipline on the campus. In that capacity one can easily fail either through the severity that goes with prejudice or the weakness that seeks popularity. Dean Stacy made a splendid record, for he was neither prejudiced nor weak. He went straight to the matter in hand with the sympathy of a father but also with the rugged sense of the moral standard. In this way he endeared himself to the students and commanded their admiration and respect.—Rev. W. D. Moss in Tar Heel.

Professor Stacy, living and working with Dr. Graham, was animated by his spirit and vision, and had he been spared to guide the destinies of the University longer would, we believe, have come nearer accomplishing the ideals of President Graham than any other man we know. President Graham and Dr. Stacy have both been taken from us but with us their spirit still remains. We will miss their personalities, their kindness of heart, their leadership. And while we mourn their going may their spirit be perpetual among us in a future leadership that will "bear likeness to their own."—Tar Heel.

PROFESSOR MYERS LECTURES

On the evening of Monday, December 2, Professor William Starr Myers, an alumnus of this University (1897), and now Professor of Politics at Princeton, delivered to a large and appreciative audience, a most interesting and effective address: "After the War—What?" No attempt will be made here to make a précis of the lecture, as Professor Myers covered so many different phases—social, political, economic, international—of the great problems of reconstruction and re-adjustment. Suffice it to say that his lecture was unusually clear, vigorous, pointed, and effective. After it was over, no one could remain in doubt as to Professor Myers' convictions on the various topics treated; and it may be fairly said that his views as expressed were sane, patriotic, and characteristically American. The University here feels genuine pride in Professor Myers, who holds the chair of politics formerly held by Dr. John H. Finley, and also delivers lectures on government and jurisprudence formerly delivered by President Woodrow Wilson. Professor Myers is one of the most effective platform lecturers in the country, and last year delivered lectures and addresses to upwards of a quarter of a million people, chiefly on current history, politics, and the war.

"Men of the Burning Heart" is the title of an octavo volume of 222 pages written by Rev. M. T. Plyler, A. M. '05, Presiding Elder of the Wilmington district of the North Carolina Methodist Conference, and his brother, Rev. A. W. Plyler, of Greensboro. The publication was issued in August by the Commercial Printing Company, of Raleigh, and contains biographical sketches of Rev. G. W. Ivey, Lorenzo Dow, and Peter Doub. The first and last mentioned ministers were widely known throughout North Carolina.

The University Library is in receipt of reprints of articles by Chief Justice Walter Clark upon The Raising, Organization, and Equipment of North Carolina Troops during the Civil War, and Judicial Supremacy Unwarranted by the Constitution. The articles appeared respectively in the Proceedings of the North Carolina Historical Association and the Public.

A bulletin containing valuable information on both sides of the question for the high school debates has just come from the printers. Copies may be secured by writing to E. R. Rankin, Debating Union Secretary.

RESOLUTIONS OF MECKLENBURG CHAPTER

The members of the Mecklenburg Alumni Association of the University of North Carolina have been shocked beyond expression at the death of Edward Kidder Graham, our president, teacher, and friend. We all agree that as a president of the University he was really great; as a teacher he was most inspiring of thorough study and perfect work, and as a friend he freely gave the full rich measure of his all.

His life work was well done, we all know, but we cannot realize that he is dead. He is not dead to the University, nor to us, but lives in the spiritual influence he embodied and worked out through the University for mankind and in the everlasting ruby vaults of men's human hearts.

In our sorrow, therefore, we hereby offer to those of his immediate family circle our heartfelt sympathy; and we hereby resolve that the spirit which he so perfectly embodied shall by each of us according to our ability be carried on.

The strength of this bank lies not alone in its Capital, Surplus, and Resources, but in the Character and Financial Responsibility of the men who conduct its affairs

St. Martins, Pa. The following item was taken from one of the Philadelphia papers: "A dinner was given Thanksgiving day by Mrs. J. Rundle Smith, of 919 Clinton street, in honor of her niece, Miss Ethel Merryweather Newbold, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Reese Newbold, of St. Martins, and Major George Vaughn Strong, son of Mrs. George Vaughn Strong, of Raleigh, whose engagement was announced yesterday."—Greensboro Daily News of December 7.

—Extracts from a letter from James W. Battle, of Montgomery, Alabama, who is on active duty with the A. E. F. in France, Supply Co. 311, Q. M. C., A. P. O. No. 705, to R. D. W. Comor, are as follows:

"Have been in France for seven months, and anything at all concerning the University is much appreciated.

"There are no alumni of the University in Bordeaux that I have been able to discover, hence at the banquet on October 12th I was the only member present. However, I thought very much of dear old Chapel Hill that night and had a very good time at the little French restaurant at Bordeaux." —P. C. Darden is now located at Wilson.

GEO. W. EUTSLER, President, 550 E. Jones St., Raleigh, N. C. —W. Doub Kerr has been returned from overseas and is confined to a hospital at Ellis Island, New York. He hopes to be moved soon to a hospital nearer Greensboro. He was formerly a member of hospital unit No. 65.

—Geo. W. Eutsler is now located at 550 E. Jones St., Raleigh, N. C., where he will be until the obsequies over the remains of Camp Polk are concluded. He is with Holloday-Crouse Co., contractors and builders.

—DEAR MR. MANNING:—I am writing to you concerning the death of your son "Freddie" (Lt. Fred Manning, C. A. C.), which took place in Brest, France, at the Naval Base Hospital No. 1, about October 24, 1918.

Freddie was dangerously ill on board the transport coming over (pneumonia), and died about two days after our arrival. Unfortunately to relate also, our major died on shipboard—so there is sorrow in other homes on account of death of loved ones.

Freddie received the best medical attention possible on board the transport, but he was fated to die, so it seems. I was attached to Freddie—I admired him. We were both southerners (I, from Savannah, Ga.) almost the same age, and we had lots in common. I met Freddie for the first time at Camp Eustis, Va., where we reported for duty with the 4th T. M. Bn., and I being a battery commander gave him help and assistance to master his work, which he did in wonderful style.

When our Major Beverly died on shipboard, I took command of the 4th T. M. Bn., being senior captain, and I am still in command and hope to be its major, and while around Brest for several days, I made personal visits to find out about Freddie and several more of my men who were sick. I wasn't present at his death, but I found out it was brave and peaceful, and you can rest assured you had a noble son who gave his life for God, country, and humanity. Sad as it is, I beg you to enjoy the comfort which comes from the satisfaction that a brave and true American passed away when Freddie died, and that he glorified himself just the same as if he forfeited his life on the battlefield. I pray God's peace for his sweet mother—our mothers are the real sufferers. To his brothers and sisters, I extend a heartfelt sympathy and join them in their sorrow.

could not attend the funeral, so I collected all the information as to his place of burial and personally visited the site and instructed the lieutenant in charge of all the burials to place him in a certain grave which I have located and sketched for your information. Our chaplain, John A. Toohey, was present with me and noted the place for Freddie's burial.

The following is a description: The place of burial is the American Soldiers' section of the cemetery at the town of Lambesellae, about two miles outside of Brest, France. The grave is located as the first grave in the second row from the brick wall of the cemetery.

On my return to the States, I hope to see you or call upon you and tell you more about your great loss.

With deepest feelings, I am

ROBERT A. LAIRD, Capt. C. A. C.

A. P. O. 903, Nov. 2, 1918.

HUGH B. HESTER, Secretary, A. E. F., France

—Lieut. Francis F. Bradshaw spent a few days on the Hill recently. He has been transferred from Camp Custer, Michigan, to Camp Taylor, Kentucky, F. A. C. O. T. S. He expects to be released within the next six months.

—A. Q. Castelle is cashier of the Bank of Anlander.

—Oliver M. Litaker, Law '16, who was in training at the Pelham Bay Naval Station, N. Y., in December for a commission, expected to be released from service soon. He will resume his duties as cashier of the First National Bank of Thomasville. He reported several Carolina men in training with him.

—Lieutenant McDaniel Lewis is with Co. G, 11th Infantry, A. E. F., France.

—Thomas W. Ruffin, of Louisburg, is engaged in the practice of law. He was to report at Camp Fremont, California, for the officers' school in December, but the signing of the armistice cancelled his orders.

H. G. BAITY, Secretary, A. P. O. 774, First Army C. O. O., A. E. F., France

—Jim A. Capps, who has been with the Y. M. C. A. overseas, has just returned to the States. He proceeded immediately to the Hill upon arriving at New York before going to his home, Gastonia. He will take an M. A. degree this spring. Capps was in the front line trenches on several occasions of his own free will and experienced many thrilling and tense moments, his outfit being exposed to the long range guns at all times. He was gassed once and laid up in a hospital for awhile.

—W. C. Dowd, Jr., who is with the Motor Truck Co. No. 441, in France, in a long and intensely interesting letter to his family in Charlotte, closes with the following paragraph:

"How's the flu? I'm hoping, family, it hasn't hit any of you. It's treacherous, of Hunnish characteristics. I imagine that's what took Ed Graham away—the severest shock I have received on this side. I read of his death in a recent issue of the New York Herald. North Carolina has lost her foremost student; her pioneer educator; her greatest, if there is a superlative, man. Personally, I never felt better. Am feeling tip top in every respect—and have no intentions of feeling any other way. And I'm hoping you're with me."

—DeBerry Ledbetter, Phar. '17, holds the rank of pharmacist's mate in the Navy and is located at 125 East Balt. St., Baltimore, Md.
